Hi

Welcome to Spring! Our Future Nature exhibition recently opened to a bustling crowd, and we'll be running some cool workshops for kids this September to get their creativity flowing. Next month we've got new works from the natural world in Scented Intoxication from multi-disciplinary artists, Lyn Balzer and Anthony Perkins. Until then...here's what's on around locally and nationally this month.

Touring

If you're in Western Australia this month check out the works from our 12 exhibiting designers at Resolved: Journeys in Australian Design at Bunbury Regional Art Galleries until the 27th September before it heads to Geraldton Regional Art Gallery on 10th October.

Designer's Den

Three of Australia's hottest emerging designers will face off a judging panel and will receive some cold and hard truths from industry lynchpins. In its second year, Designer's Den showcases emerging design talent, providing a platform to take their ideas and businesses to the next level.

Giveaway

Carriageworks & OzAsia Festival present this fully immersive digital and live performance experience, Superposition, by renowned artist, Ryoji Ikeda. Using a combination of synchronized video screens, real-time content feeds, digital sound sculptures, and for the first time in Ikeda's work human performers, superposition explores the conceptual world opened up by quantum theory. Carriageworks will be giving away a double pass to one of our Australian Design Centre readers.

Please email your full name and Superposition in the subject title to the Australian Design Centre team by Thursday 17th September. The winner will be notified by email.

What's on in Sydney

For all things free and design, Sydney is a great place to be this month with Ultimate Art's Art in the Family exploring art through the creation process in guided tours throughout the CBD; UNSW will be running lunchtime workshops and industry expert panel discussions as part of their Design-Led Tuesdays, which dissects design thinking and innovation; Sydney Architecture Festival will be running over the October long weekend (2nd-5th) and will host a series of great indoor and outdoor events, including photography classes, yoga, workshops and talks, and drawing classes; Australian Museum will be running their Wild Planet Activity Room for the school holidays, with parents getting in for free (after general admission).
